States may be eligible for extra credit if protective policies are extended to youth age 18+ and/or child labor trafficking victims.

INSIGHTS FROM THE FIELD

Notes

Stakeholders are invited to share information about non-legislative successes in their state, including policies, practices, and initiatives that have improved responses to child sex trafficking survivors. Although these insights will not impact state grades, they will be included within the Analysis Report to paint a more complete picture of a state's anti-child sex trafficking response from the perspective of field experts.
